Round Table on Climate Change

International Conference within Bled Film Festival

Bled, June 16, 2015

Water, the most essential life-sustaining resource, has been increasingly called "the new oil." With drastic changes in access to fresh clean water, societies and institutions around the globe face the fundamental question of what water is and how it should be governed.

The round table in the second part of the conference will give a special focus to the ongoing climate negotiations within the United Nations Convention on Climate Change with the goal of adopting new global climate agreement at the end of 2015 in Paris".

Join a group of business leaders, civil servants, NGO change makers, thought-provoking academics and inspiring artists as they explore water in the 21st century and imagine the steps we can take together to assure the best possible future for global fresh water supply.
